Everything you need to know about the 2019 Boston Pride Parade

Get ready to show your Pride this weekend. METRO STAFF

Pride Week 2019 comes to a close in Boston this weekend, and as usual, the festivities are set to end in style. Since Massachusetts was the first state to legalize same-sex marriage, we take our celebrations of the LGBTQ community seriously, which is why the annual Pride Parade is always a must-see event. In addition to marking 49 years of the parade, this year's Pride celebrations are also commemorating 50 years of the Stonewall Uprising. Ahead of its return this weekend, here's what you need to know about the 2019 Boston Pride Parade.

When is it and what's the route?

The Boston Pride Parade is set to return to the streets of Boston on Saturday, June 8. The fun kicks off from Copley Square at noon. Floats and parade participants will then march down Claredon Street before turning onto Tremont Street. The fun then hits Berkeley Street before turning onto Boylston Street. The final leg of the parade will head up Charles Street, turn on Beacon Street and then proceed across Tremont Street before ending at City Hall Plaza.

What else should I know?

Besides breaking out your best rainbow attire, spectators should be prepared to bring their rain gear if the forecast doesn't cooperate on Saturday. If you have little ones, make sure to keep an eye on them, especially as the crowds grow throughout the day. Additionally, always be respectful and listen to any instructions given by parade staff and volunteers.

Spectators can also keep the party going once the parade hits City Hall Plaza. The Pride Festival will take over the space on Saturday and is set to kick off at 11 a.m. before wrapping up at about 6 p.m. Over 120 exhibitors will be on hand, plus plenty of tasty drinks and great food to munch on. There will be all sorts of activities for the whole family to enjoy, including a fun zone for the little ones as well as an interactive exhibit with an owl courtesy of the New England Zoo.

The Boston Pride Concert will be held in conjunction with the fest, featuring performances by Todrick Hall, Robin S., and Beth Sacks. While the show is free to watch, fans can purchase special tickets for the concert as well, which include a meet-and-greet with the stars, VIP seating and more. The concert kicks off at noon and ends at 6 p.m. on Saturday.

50 Years later, the Stonewall Inn is spreading Pride all over the globe

On the 50th anniversary of Pride, the Stonewall Inn is still fighting for change all over the world.

PAT KING

It was a rainy day in New York City as legendary bar and ground zero for Global Pride the Stonewall Inn celebrated its 50th anniversary of Pride with a kick-off party. The night was a fundraiser for the bar's official foundation, the Stonewall Inn Gives Back Initiative (SIGBI), in order to raise resources for activist groups in mostly-rural areas to help fund their efforts to effect meaningful change on the ground.

The energy in the packed bar was palpable as people were drinking and celebrating this special evening in the place where those riots of the Stonewall Uprising occurred half a century ago. Patrons and friends packed the upstairs room as members of SIGBI presented a grant to Brandon West, a young activist from Southeast Kansas whose organization, Project Q&A, had helped to bring visibility to the LGBTQ community in his rural area.

"All across our nation, in towns large and small, there are members of our rainbow family living in fear of being fired from their jobs, denied housing, and being shunned from their communities," said West, addressing the crowd. "Living in rural communities can be a scary and isolating place for LGBTQ people. Yet even in small towns, there are a large number of LGBTQ individuals being supported by an even larger number of allies. In 2016, I started an organization called Project Q&A with a mission to raise awareness for the LGBTQ community through education, empowerment and visibility. Connecting our sizable gay community with our allies, we worked to ensure that our small rural area isn't so isolated."

After receiving help from SIGBI in 2017, Project Q&A was able to host the very first Pride in Southeast Kansas. In offering this kind of meaningful support, the Stonewall legacy is being spread all over the globe to even the most unlikely of places — which is, after all, the battle that needs to be fought.

"The whole purpose of this is to keep the Stonewall legacy alive and use that global name across the country and use it in those places where they really need it where they still have the social stigma that they face every day," explains Stacy Letz, co-owner of the Stonewall Inn and co-founder of SIGBI.

You can feel the tremendous weight and importance standing in the room. But more than that, the energy in the Stonewall Inn feels like a reassuring hug. This is a safe space. All are welcome here.

"It's the gay church, it's where people come to rejoice or where people come to mourn," says Kurt Kelly, who co-owns the Stonewall Inn with Lentz. "It's where lesbians, gay men, transgender, drag queens, straight allies — straight people if they want to come in — bears, leather...this is their home! It's a safe space for everyone. It's so globally known. I was just in Italy and one door that I saw had a picture of the Stonewall with a brick and a high heel [laughs]. That's how well-known it is!"

So what will be Stonewall's legacy 50 years from now? As the neighborhood institution still remains where it always has, the word "Stonewall" itself has become a signpost for the LGBTQ community across the globe. For Lentz, she believes the Greenwich Village bar will be remembered and looked to as an example for future generations of how to create an all-encompassing safe space.

"Stonewall itself is a global icon, a symbol across the globe, and that's what it needs to be," explains Lentz on the importance of the bar. "We want to make sure it stays a bar and a place for the community to gather."

New Day and Night Pill for Bladder Leaking Amazes Users

Pads, liners, and adult diapers may no longer be needed thanks to an amazing new pill; clinical studies show users experience dramatic reductions in bathroom trips, embarrassing leaking, and nighttime urgency with one dose daily.

By Dr. Henry Esber, PhD

BOSTON – Adult diaper sales are expected to plummet as results from a clinical trial on a new, patented bladder control pill have finally been released.

Sold under the brand name UriVarx™, the new pill contains key ingredients that keeps the bladder from releasing voluntarily, which reduces accidents and frequent bathroom trips.

Perhaps more impressive, it also targets the tiny muscles around the bladder, which helps the bladder to create a tighter seal.

This would explain why the average UriVarx™ user in clinical trials experiences a 66% reduction in urinary symptoms, such as day and night leaking and sudden urges to urinate.

NEW DISCOVERY IN BLADDER CONTROL

Until now, doctors believed it might have been impossible to strengthen the muscles that control the bladder. They are amazed to see that it can now be done with the non-prescription UriVarx™ pill.

"As you get older, and the involuntary muscles around your bladder weaken, you lose urinary control. With your bladder wall unable to properly seal, you constantly leak and feel pressure to urinate" explains Dr. Henry Esber of Innovus Pharmaceuticals.

"UriVarx™ targets the bladder muscles and help restores vital kidney health, reducing urgency and frequency. It also helps you "hold it" for hours so you never have to worry about embarrassing accidents ever again!"

FREEDOM FROM SUDDEN URGES AND LEAKS

Since hitting the market, sales for the patented UriVarx™ pill have soared and there are some very good reasons why.

To begin with, the double blind large clinical studies published in the clinicaltrials.gov have been impressive. Participants taking UriVarx™ saw a stunning reduction in urinary frequency, which resulted in fewer bathroom trips both day and night.

They also experienced a dramatic decrease in incontinence episodes, such as leaking and bed wetting.

The active ingredients in UriVarx™ comes from a patented formula. It is both safe and healthy. There are also no known serious side effects in any of its clinical trials.

Scientists believe that the ingredients target the muscles of the bladder to grow stronger. These muscles are responsible for keeping the bladder tightly sealed. They also help the bladder to completely empty, allowing bacteria to be flushed from the urinary tract.

Research has shown that as you get older, certain hormonal changes in the body cause these muscles to shrink and become lose. This is what causes the bladder to be over active and the resulting urine accidents and why UriVarx™ seems to be so effective in the published clinical trials.

EXCITING RESULTS FROM URIVARX USERS

Many UriVarx™ users say their bladders have never been stronger. For the first time in years, they are confident and in complete control. Adult pads and diapers are no longer a big worry.

"After my third child, I couldn't control my bladder. I was running to the bathroom all the time! And once I hit my 60s it became so unpredictable I needed to wear adult pads every day" explains one user.

"I was embarrassed so before going to my doctor I decided to try UriVarx and I'm so glad I did! The urgency is gone and I no longer feel like my bladder is about to explode. I can also "hold it" when I need to so I'm no longer living in constant fear of finding a bathroom."

IMPRESSIVE CLINICAL RESULTS

The exciting clinical results published on the government clinical website clinicaltrials.gov show that UriVarx™ can strengthen your bladder fast, significantly reducing the urine urgency and leaks.

In a new double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical study, 142 men and women with bladder control issues were separated into two groups. The first group was given a placebo while the other received UriVarx™.

The results were incredible. The participants who received UriVarx™ saw major improvements in leaking, pressure, and the urgency to go – all without the usual side effects seen in prescription drugs! They also reported fewer trips to the bathroom both day and night.

Overall, the UriVarx™ group experienced:

- 56% Reduction in Urge Incontinence
- 66% Reduction in Stress Incontinence
- 61% Reduction in Urgency
- 33% Reduction in Frequency
- 46% Reduction in Nighttime Bathroom Trips

Additionally, at the end of clinical trial and after seeing the results, 84% of the participants taking UriVarx™ said it significantly improved their quality of life.

"The clinical findings are incredible, but people still wonder if it will really work" explains Dr. Henry Esber. "It's normal to be skeptical, but we've seen thousands of UriVarx™ users get results exactly like the participants in the study. It's an amazing product."

HOW IT WORKS

UriVarx™ is taken just once daily and it's effects last day and night. It does not require a prescription.

The active ingredients are patented natural extracts.

NEW PILL MAY REPLACE DIAPERS FOR BLADDER CONTROL: This new patented clinically proven pill solution is now available nationwide

Research shows that as we get older, the muscles which surround the bladder weaken. This is caused by hormonal changes, among other factors, in the body that causes the muscles to atrophy and weaken.

When they become too small and weak, they cannot seal your bladder shut, which causes leaking, accidents, among other incontinence symptoms.

It also prevents your bladder from fully emptying, which can result in persistent bacterial infections and UTIs.

UriVarx's™ active ingredient targets the muscles around the bladder, making them stronger. Supporting ingredients in UriVarx™ support kidney function and overall urinary health.

BLADDER PROBLEMS GONE

With daily use, UriVarx™ can restore strong bladder control and help users overcome leakage without the serious side effects or interactions associated with drugs.

Leakage sufferers can now put an end to the uncontrollable urges, the embarrassing accidents, and enjoy an entirely new level of comfort and confidence.

Billy Porter on living life out loud

How the "Pose" actor found acceptance and purpose through a life of "service." PAT KING

Billy Porter is on his lunch break during what many would consider a late dinner. Members of the press were lucky to gain an audience with the esteemed actor in between his shooting schedule for the second season of FX's acclaimed show "Pose," which focuses on the New York City ball culture of the 1980s. Porter has gained wide praise for his role as Pray Tell, the revered emcee of the scene, and his larger-than-life personality can be felt as he is eating his catered meal on a Bronx soundstage.

The roundtable conversation was meant to focus on the premiere of the new season on Tuesday, June 11 (more on that next week), but eventually circled around to Porter's recent universal acceptance after more than 25 years in show business. Much like the characters on the show, Porter, 49, has had to fight through prejudices in Hollywood surrounding race, sex and gender in order to have the world catch up with his authentic self.

"The thing I love about this show is that it really speaks to the idea that joy is a choice," says Porter. "That life is a choice. You can choose it or not. When you watch people in the depth of the worst kind of circumstances possible, choose life anyway. That's what this show is about. We're choosing life anyway when everybody is telling us that we don't even deserve to exist on this planet — and we're living through a plague!

"As the world moves forward and we win some rights and things get better, it gets more and more difficult to explain to people the disparity is still too much.

PARI DUKOVIC | FX

"I could entertain you, but the at-what-cost part of the story, which is my human story, which is the third-dimension part of my humanity, is shut out. We don't want to hear that, just come and entertain me. You black people, you gay people, you whatever. It's like, you can come and sing for me, but you can't stay at the same hotel."

While it has been a long road for Porter, he is certainly not turning back now.

"It's interesting for me because I was presented, in my hero's journey, with it 20 years ago: I could stay on this road and be the clown and the sideman and do the same s—t or I could honor myself, be completely authentic. I chose my authenticity over any version of what the possibility of fame could look like inauthentically. I was watching Oprah, actually, as I am wont to do. It was her, Maya Angelou and, I think, Iyanla Vanzant, and they were talking about service. When your intention is service, everything else will work itself out. Here I am in show business, and I'm like, how can I be of service to something other than my own ego or my bank account in an industry that is inherently narcissistic? It's like you need to have some version of ego to simply survive.

"And the ton of bricks hit me, oh right, everybody is trying to tell me that I can't do anything unless I act like a straight man. By acting like a straight man, it's their version of what a straight man means. It's their version of performed masculinity put on me. It's actually not about masculinity. It's about, 'We know you're gay, so you will never be able to live up to what our version of masculinity is.'

"From the minute that I could comprehend thought, my masculinity was in question. They sent me to the school psychologist every day when I was 5 years old. Every day after school, to talk. About what? What are we talking about? From the minute I could comprehend anything, I needed to be 'fixed.' It was 20 years ago when I said, 'I actually don't need to be fixed.' I'm fine just as I am. I don't know how to live that way, because everything up until now has told me otherwise. I'm still going to have to fight that every single day of my life. I'm prepared to do so because service is showing up for myself. Being authentic for myself first. We teach people how to treat us. If I don't treat myself right, nobody else knows how."

5 Reasons Boston is a huge part of LGBTQ history

Boston may not be the first city you think about during Pride, but here's why it should be.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

When people think about Pride, more often than not, they automatically think of San Francisco or New York City, not Boston. Boston doesn't get the credit it deserves for its rich LGBTQ history. From founding GLAD to the Gay Community Times, here are some reasons why Boston's LGBTQ community is crucial in the fight for equality.

1. The Gay Community Times

In 1973, Boston published the first issue of the Gay Community Times, which started as a local newsletter featuring a calendar of events for the LGBTQ community. Soon, the once-local publication grew to a national publication, and became a resource for all LGBTQ issues around the country. It was published weekly from 1973 to 1992 and continued as a quarterly publication until 1999.

2. The founding of GLAD

GLAD (Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders) was founded in 1978 by Boston-based lawyer John Ward. The first case for GLAD was a year later, Doe v. McNiff, which charged Boston's public library and police officials with violating the civil rights of a man arrested at the library and later found not guilty. GLAD continues to fight to end discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender identity, HIV status, and more.

3. The election of Elaine Noble

Elaine Noble was the first openly gay member elected to the U.S. House of Representatives. She served two terms in office beginning in 1975. Before she running for office, Noble helped set up some of Boston's earliest Pride marches. Campaigning for office was not an easy feat for Noble, who dealt with her car and campaign office being vandalized. She even received death threats. Besides being a supporter of gay rights, she was a huge advocate for desegregation of Boston's public schools.

4. The History Project

In the 1980s a group of activists, historians, archivists and writers were provided with a grant from the City of Boston to document Boston's vibrant LGBTQ history. The group made a slideshow of LGBTQ history, which was shown throughout the city and, eventually, at the Boston Public Library. It became one of the biggest exhibitions the library had ever hosted. It is now one of the largest independent LGBTQ archives in the United States.

5. Barney Frank's coming out

Barney Frank served in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1981 to 2013. The first bill he proposed was to prohibit discrimination of employment based on sexual orientation, which did not pass. However, it was the first attempt to legally protect gay rights in Massachusetts. In 1987, he became the first member of Congress to voluntarily declare his sexuality. In July 2012, he became the first sitting U.S. representative to enter a same-sex marriage.

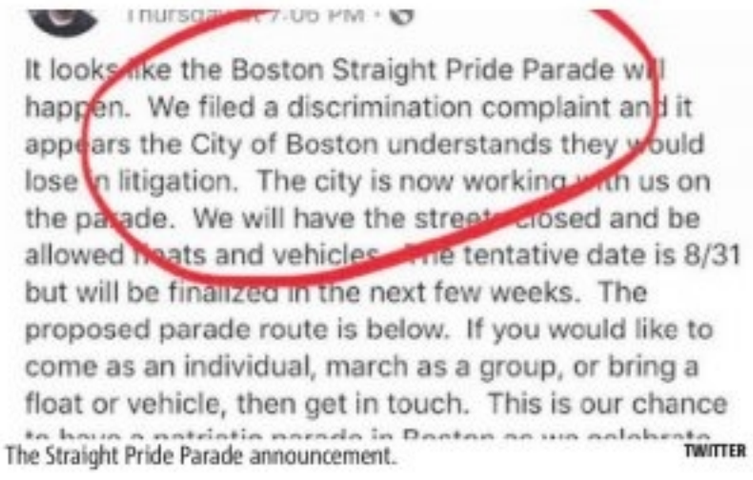
Boston 'Straight Pride Parade' plan ignites shock and disgust

"Straight Pride" planners point their troll tactics straight at Pride Week and Stonewall riots anniversary.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

The announcement of a plan for a so-called Straight Pride Parade in Boston has quickly traveled the span of the social media sphere and sparked national outrage.

"It looks like the Boston Straight Pride Parade will happen. We filed a discrimination complaint and it appears the City of Boston understands they would lose in litigation," Straight Pride Parade planner Mark Sahady wrote on Facebook. "The city is now working with us on the parade. We will have the streets closed and be allowed floats and vehicles."



It looks like the Boston Straight Pride Parade will happen. We filed a discrimination complaint and it appears the City of Boston understands they would lose in litigation. The city is now working with us on the parade. We will have the streets closed and be allowed floats and vehicles. The tentative date is 8/31 but will be finalized in the next few weeks. The proposed parade route is below. If you would like to come as an individual, march as a group, or bring a float or vehicle, then get in touch. This is our chance

The Straight Pride Parade announcement. TWITTER

This month marks the 50th anniversary of Pride, and the birth of the modern gay rights movement in the Stonewall riots, otherwise known as the Stonewall Uprising, where members of the LGBTQ community made their stand at the Stonewall Inn in New York City's Greenwich Village against unjust raids and crackdowns at gay-friendly hangout spots.

Patrons of the Stonewall Inn fought sporadically with police officers over the span of three nights in June 1969, after patrons became fed up with police.

"Every year, Boston hosts our annual Pride Week, where our city comes together to celebrate the diversity, strength and acceptance of our LGBTQ community," Mayor Marty Walsh told MassLive. "This is a special week that represents Boston's values of love and inclusion, which are unwavering. I encourage everyone to join us in celebration this Saturday for the Pride Parade and in the fight for progress and equality for all."

Following in the footsteps of this weekend's Boston Pride Parade, a decades-old celebration of LGBTQ history and culture, a group of right-wing provocateurs called "Super Happy Fun America" hope to start in Copley Square and stroll through the South End before heading to the Boston Common and City Hall.

Boston officials said the group had been in contact with the city, but had not yet received the necessary permits to host the parade.

Meanwhile, the internet went bonkers after New York Times Assistant Managing Editor Carolyn Ryan shared a screenshot of Sahady's Facebook post on Twitter. A social media public flogging followed.

> "Every year, Boston hosts our annual Pride Week, where our city comes together to celebrate the diversity, strength and acceptance of our LGBTQ community."
> Mayor Marty Walsh

"Swipe at St Patrick's Parade in southie which won't let gay groups march," wrote @DougDodsonENews.

"The straight pride parade will be mostly men because very few women will get to come," wrote @OhNoSheTwitnt.

"They're planning a 'straight pride' parade in Boston, presumably to commemorate that historic moment when courageous heterosexual frat bros finally stood up to the gay cops who had been harassing and arresting them for decades," wrote @GeorgeTakei.

Rock band Smash Mouth promptly smacked the idea in the mouth, tweeting: "Straight Pride Parade????? F—K OFF!!!!!!!!"

Even BarStool Sports offered up a thumbs-down on the Straight Pride Parade.

The parade is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 31.

Meek Mill granted fresh chance to overturn conviction

Philly rapper Meek Mill has been granted a new trial and judge, and a fresh chance to argue against his 2008 gun and drug conviction, according to NBC Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania Superior Court granted Mill a hearing after years of vying for a chance to argue to get his conviction overturned due to questions about the credibility of the arresting officer.

"We're looking forward to the oral argument before the Superior Court of Pennsylvania and to, hopefully, having Mill's conviction vacated," Mill's attorney, Jordan Siev, said in a statement. "In light of the district attorney's recent filing, where he supports the granting of a new trial to Mill and the recusal of Common Pleas Judge Genece Brinkley, we hope to have this injustice rectified once and for all."

Meek Mill, whose real name is Robert Rihmeek Williams, became a symbol for criminal-justice reform after Brinkley sentenced him to two to four years in prison for minor probation violations.

GETTY IMAGE

Problems between Mill and Brinkley go way back, according to Rolling Stone magazine.

Brinkley, who sentenced Mill to 90 days of house arrest following a February 2016 probation violation, had sentenced him to 11 to 23 months following his conviction in 2008.

Then in March 2017, Mill was charged with misdemeanor assault following a scuffle at an airport, and was arrested in New York for popping wheelies on his dirt bike without a helmet, and served five months before the Supreme Court ordered him freed while his appeal of Brinkley's sentence was pending last April.

Brinkley sentenced the rapper to two to four years in prison for violating his 10-year probation, citing a failed drug test, failure to comply with a court order restricting his travel, and the misdemeanor charges.

Defense attorneys had called for a new trial and judge for Mill on several occasions, claiming that the Common Pleas Judge abused her discretion and has held bias against him. Brinkley rejected the accusations and refused to recuse herself. NATE HOMAN

Infrastructure to be studied as MBTA hunts for new revenue

MBTA to spend $1 million studying parking and land use.

DAN ATKINSON

FILE PHOTO

The MBTA plans to spend up to a million dollars to study changes to parking and other potential development at its properties. Transportation watchdogs say the research could lead to more modernization of stations and bring in more revenue, but stress that the process needs to be handled carefully.

Specifically, the T is looking for consultants for two studies — one to examine the market for parking across the system, and another focusing on land use, specifically at Alewife station — with a combined budget of $1 million to produce results in the next nine months. Information from the Alewife study will help instruct the larger survey, T officials said.

> "There's clearly stations where there is a parking shortage, but there are other needs around stations. Housing is important."
> Chris Dempsey, director, Transportation for Massachusetts

That larger study will reportedly give the T a framework to make "informed tradeoffs between bicycle and automobile investment" and determine which stations have a parking surplus or gaps. Ultimately, MBTA officials hope the effort will spur "reconfiguring [of] MBTA station access to better support customer journeys," according to bid documents. T spokesman Joe Pesaturo said the agency would continue to support both methods of transit — bike and auto — to and from stations.

Chris Dempsey, director of the coalition Transportation for Massachusetts, said the T should primarily study aspects of its infrastructure that have not received enough attention in the past. "It makes sense to ask questions about what the alternatives to parking may be. There's clearly stations where there is a parking shortage, but there are other needs around stations. Housing is important."

Dempsey said that he supports the Alewife study, which includes "a market analysis of the potential to support joint development." The MBTA is one of the largest landowners in the state and the Alewife parking garage — which was shuttered last year after concrete fell from its ceiling — is still valued at more than $64 million, according to the City of Cambridge, while the T also owns other parcels where there has been significant development.

"The Alewife area is changing quickly, and it is an area of key importance both to the City of Cambridge and the surrounding area," Pesaturo said. "This study isn't inherently about selling or leasing the land, but understanding how the Alewife station and garage can contribute to a dynamic urban area while meeting the mobility needs of transit customers."

Charlie Chieppo, a senior fellow at the Pioneer Institute, said the T could potentially reap millions from the sale and lease of property, but said the transit-focused agency should let outsiders handle any property deals down the road.

Man pleads not guilty to charges in Tuesday's Back Bay shooting

New details have emerged about a shocking daytime shooting that killed a man in Back Bay on Tuesday morning.

A Rhode Island man pleaded not guilty to fatally shooting a Boston taxicab driver who refused to drive him out of town.

Prosecutors allege that Phillip Foy, 34, of Pawtucket shot 60-year-old Luckinson Oruma after he declined to give him a ride to Mansfield, which is 30 miles from where they were located, near The Pru.

At his arraignment Wednesday, Foy was charged with murder, armed carjacking and unlawful possession of a firearm. He was ordered held without bail.

Prosecutors said that when Oruma refused Foy's request for a ride, Foy told him to move the car or he was going to "move" him. Oruma continued to refuse

DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

Foy's commands, and that's when Foy allegedly pulled Oruma from the cab, and shot him in the street, including once in the back.

"Mr. Oruma fell to the ground and the defendant stood over him and fired a few more times, while he was down," Assistant District Attorney John Verner said in court.

Bystanders called 911 as Foy attempted to flee the scene of the crime by getting behind the wheel of the cab. According to police, Foy only made it a short distance before hopping out and throwing his gun and shoes into the street. He allegedly gave cops a "full confession."

According to a report by WCVB, Oruma was a hardworking father of five children, and his family had recently relocated from Nigeria to be with him.

"I just hope this person does his time for the crime he committed and hopefully he finds peace," Oruma's son, Jeffrey Oruma, was quoted as saying. "I just hope he's able to live with it and, hopefully, God forgives him for whatever he did."

A GoFundMe account has been set up to help Oruma's family, and by Wednesday afternoon had raised more than $7,000 toward a $20,000 goal.

Airlines scramble to overcome polluter stigma as 'flight shame' movement grows

In Lorna Greenwood's London home, there is a shelf lined with travel guides. But the 32-year-old mother and former government employment lawyer has given up flying. Greenwood, who grew up enthralled by the possibilities offered by plane travel, is part of a growing group of environmental activists in Northern Europe who are shunning flights as concerns about global climate change increase."It's a tough pill to swallow, but when you look at the issues around climate change, then the sacrifice all of a sudden becomes small," Greenwood said.A Swedish-born anti-flying movement is spreading to other European countries, creating a whole new vocabulary, from "flygskam" which translates as "flight shame" to "tågskryt," or "train brag."

A number of famous Swedes have stopped flying, including opera singer Malena Ernman, the mother of teenage activist Greta Thunberg who has thrust climate change into the spotlight."Flygskam" was a major topic at a three-day airline summit in Seoul this weekend, with global industry leaders launching a counter-offensive.

"Unchallenged, this sentiment will grow and spread," Alexandre de Juniac, head of the International Air Transport Association (IATA) told some 150 CEOs.The industry says it is shrinking its carbon footprint and its sustainability plan is among the most ambitious and globally focused of any industry."Come on, stop calling us polluters," de Juniac said at a news conference after detailing the global initiative. The IATA said the CO2 emission for each CEO's flight to Seoul was half the amount of a 1990 flight, largely thanks to more fuel-efficient aircraft.

An airplane is silhouetted against a full moon in the sky over London January 1, 2010. REUTERS/SUZANNE PLUNKETT

STRUGGLE

Commercial flying accounts for about 2.5% of global carbon emissions today but without concrete steps, that number will rise as global air travel increases. The aviation industry has set out a four-pronged plan to achieve carbon-neutral growth from 2020 and halve net emissions from 2005 levels by 2050.But airline leaders acknowledge they have struggled to articulate their plans in a way that resonates with the public. When CNN anchor Richard Quest asked a room full of aviation executives whether they had used an often available booking option to offset emissions from their own flights to the South Korean capital, only a handful raised their hands. The industry's plan rests on a mix of alternative fuel, improved operations such as direct flight paths and new planes or other technology. But a widely publicized March study funded by investors managing $13 trillion said airlines were doing too little.

OFFSET SCHEME

Questions remain over how airlines will slow, steady and finally reduce harmful emissions. Use of sustainable-fuel would have the single largest impact, reducing emissions from each flight by around 80%, according to the IATA. The problem is that it is in short supply.

In Europe, eliminating dozens of national airspaces borders could reduce fuel consumption by around 6 percent, but lobbying for a Single European Sky has been bogged down for years.

Airlines say small steps like single-engine taxiing and the use of lighter materials are cutting around 1-2% of emissions each year.In the absence of a quick and substantial reduction its carbon footprint, the industry has committed to a carbon-offset program.

In Stockholm, Susanna Elfors says membership on her Facebook group Tagsemester, or "Train Holiday," has spiked to some 90,000 members from around 3,000 around the end of 2017.

"Before, it was rather taboo" to discuss train travel due to climate concerns, Elfors said. "Now it's possible to talk about this on a lunch break ... and everybody understands." REUTERS

BRUINS' CORE BANGING ON DOOR OF LEGENDARY STATUS

OPINION

DANNY PICARD

Listen to "The Danny Picard Show" at dannypicard.com. Follow him on Twitter @dannypicard

It's now a best-of-three.

The Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues enter Thursday night's Game 5 tied at 2-2 in the Stanley Cup Final. Boston hosts Game 5 and, if necessary, Game 7 next Wednesday night, with Game 6 in between on Sunday night in St. Louis.

It's an interesting spot for the Bruins, who are now dealing with several injuries to key defensemen in Zdeno Chara and Matt Grzelcyk. Chara suffered a broken jaw after taking a puck to the face in Game 4. Grzelcyk suffered a concussion in Game 2 and missed Games 3 and 4.

Grzelcyk practiced on Wednesday, but was wearing a non-contact jersey, while Chara was not even in the building. These are not the kind of conversations you want to have at a time in which there are legacies to be made.

What's the window to create a legacy, anyways? Ten years? Well, three Stanley Cup Final appearances in nine years is quite the accomplishment, especially considering that the Bruins hadn't won the Cup since 1972 before finally winning it again in 2011, which was also their first Cup Final appearance since losing to the Edmonton Oilers in five games in 1990.

And by legacies, I'm talking about the likes of Chara, Patrice Bergeron, Brad Marchand, David Krejci and Tuukka Rask. All five players hoisted the Cup in 2011, in what turned out to be quite a magical run.

The same five players were also part of the Bruins' Cup Final appearance in 2013, but they lost to the Chicago Blackhawks in six games.

Now, in 2019, here they are again, going for their second Stanley Cup in three tries. And as I write this, they're just two wins away from that accomplishment. However, they're also now just two losses away from being the group that lost in the Stanley Cup Final more times than they won.

The latter sounds harsh, though, doesn't it? Way too harsh. Because even if the Blues are the team hoisting la Coupe when it's all said and done, the aforementioned core group of Bruins will always and forever be known as Stanley Cup champions, and not Stanley Cup "failures."

But imagine that group winning multiple Cups? You immediately go from being a "champion" to becoming a Bruins "legend."

Not that Chara and Bergeron aren't already Bruins legends. They are. And if Nos. 33 and 37 don't get put in the TD Garden rafters when their careers are over, then we should all riot.

The Stanley Cup is the toughest trophy to win in sports. That's maybe why it feels so damn special every time the Bruins get close to winning it. You could make the argument that Rask needs this Cup more than anyone, seeing that he was Tim Thomas' backup in 2011 and was the losing goalie in 2013. But he's still part of the original core, no matter how you break it down.

It's a special group that has the opportunity to create a special legacy as two-time Stanley Cup champions. I'm not sure anyone would've predicted this back in 2010, after the Bruins blew a 3-0 series lead to the Philadelphia Flyers in the second round.

Next thing you know, they're going into Vancouver and beating the Canucks in Game 7 to hoist the greatest trophy in sports, helping Claude Julien become the winningest coach in franchise history, and going to two more Cup Finals — one with Julien, and another, now, with Bruce Cassidy. Throughout it all, we've seen big names like Mark Recchi, Jaromir Jagr and Jarome Iginla make pit stops in Boston for a chance to join a Cup contender.

But it's Chara, Bergeron, Marchand, Krejci and Rask who've been leading the way over the entire last decade of Bruins hockey.

One more Stanley Cup would make it a legendary decade.

2019 FIFA Women's World Cup preview

The United States will begin its quest for a fourth Women's World Cup next week.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Whoever says that soccer isn't an American sport clearly doesn't pay close enough attention.

The United States Women's National Team (USWNT) heads into the 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup in France — which begins on Friday — with lofty expectations abound.

Headed by manager Jill Ellis, the Americans are the defending World Cup champions having captured their third title four years ago in Canada.

The dominant performance up north, which included a Carli Lloyd hat-trick in a 5-2 victory over Japan in the final, ended a 16-year World Cup drought that began with the magical world champions nicknamed "The '99ers."

While the Americans are still the No. 1 ranked team in the world heading into this year's tournament, Ellis has brought a versatile and in some instances, unproven side to France.

The 23-woman roster is a blend of some of the biggest names in soccer, familiar veteran faces, and some newcomers who are ready to take the world by storm.

The United States won't start their tournament until Tuesday with an opening match against Thailand in Group F play, but a packed weekend of World Cup action awaits as the hosts France get the festivities underway against South Korea.

Be sure to follow Metro throughout the 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup as we bring you previews, recaps, and reactions from the biggest soccer event of the season.

For now, take a moment to meet the United States' roster, see who Metro predicts to win the title and find a preview of the first four groups that will be in action this weekend on P. 19.

Bruins need help from funky bunch

Several key B's forwards mired in a funk.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Next week it will likely be revealed that David Krejci is playing with a broken hand, David Pastrnak is playing with a sprained knee, and Jake DeBrusk is playing with a fractured foot. For a pro hockey player, those injuries are the equivalent of a cough, sneeze or hangnail. Easy to mask.

If none of them prove to be banged up, however, and all are relatively fresh as a daisy right now then we can do some serious questioning during the off-season.

For whatever the reason (injury, fatigue or opponent), none of these guys have shown up yet in the Cup Final.

Krejci has not registered a goal or an assist against St. Louis after tallying a point in every game of the Eastern Conference Finals against Carolina. Pastrnak has been equally frustrating as he has yet to take over the way he did so many times throughout the regular season. Ditto for DeBrusk, who hasn't scored a goal since Game 2 of the Carolina series.

"I think the effort's there but at the same time I don't think we worked as a unit together (in Monday's Game 4 loss)," Krejci said. "I wasn't really happy about the way we played last game. We need to talk about it, keep talking about it. Talk is cheap at this time of the year. We just got to look at ourselves in the mirrors and do the things that we talk about doing."

DeBrusk has been mostly MIA this entire spring despite having a tremendous playoff debut last year. In 12 playoff games played in 2018, the winger netted six goals. This year, in nearly double the games played, DeBrusk only has three goals scored.

David Krejci, Jake DeBrusk and David Pastrnak have underwhelmed so far against St. Louis. GETTY IMAGES

Bruins coach Bruce Cassidy predicted before the Cup Final began that St. Louis could be the perfect matchup for the 22-year-old to get going. That obviously has not yet played out.

"This could be a good series for him," Cassidy said two weeks ago. "Carolina's D definitely flexes out and challenges you. [The Blues] do the same. I'm not sure [the Blues] are as – I don't want to be disrespectful – as fluid on their skates as Carolina but they're edgier. So I suspect a guy like Jake, if he's willing to work to get inside with his foot speed, he can separate against these guys. I think it's an important series for him … Would his numbers look better if he had six or seven goals [this post-season]? Absolutely, but we've gotten timely offense out of him. There's an opportunity for him to be a difference-maker, if it sets up."

MISCELLANEOUS

BITTER CHICORY TO SWEET ESPRESSO
By Carmine Vittoria

This book is written by a retired University professor of 35 years in Boston. He turned the page over to write a non-scientific book that he always wanted to write. Why write a book that covers the years from 1940 to 1949 in Italy when there are at least a thousand books describing every imaginable aspects of that period of time?
